

Treasa Bowers

Senior Vice President, Human Resources

Treasa Bowers serves as Senior Vice President of Human Resources for 7-Eleven, Inc. In this role, she leads the company's talent strategy, overseeing talent acquisition, talent management, training and development, total rewards, and employee relations. Treasa began her career at 7-Eleven in 1983 as an Operation Management Trainee in Salt Lake City, UT and over the next three decades was promoted to roles of increasing responsibility within Operations and Human Resources. In 2015, she became Vice President of Human Resources and Women's Diversity, Equity, Inclusion and Belonging. In 2020, Treasa was named 7-Eleven's first Chief Diversity Officer responsible for connecting 7-Eleven's DE&I strategy to business objectives with special focus on leadership growth, cultural awareness and engagement and talent management. Prior to joining 7-Eleven, Inc., Treasa pursued a career in banking and finance with First Interstate Bank.

Treasa has been awarded Seven & I Holdings' Ship Shape Award (1993), Division Staff Person of the Year (1994), and Human Resources Excellence Award (2013). In 2017, she was recognized as Convenience Store News'(CSN) "Mentor of the Year" and one of the "Top Women in Convenience." She currently serves on multiple non-profit boards including CSN's Diversity and Inclusion Advisory Board, Scholarship America, and the Global Leadership Enhancement and Mentoring Network.

Treasa is a graduate of the Human Resources Institute at Villanova University and received a Bachelor of Science degree in business administration and management from Kennedy-Western University. She lives in Frisco, TX with her husband, Tony, and their son, Jared.
